

Timesaving and convenient: New on-site coaching

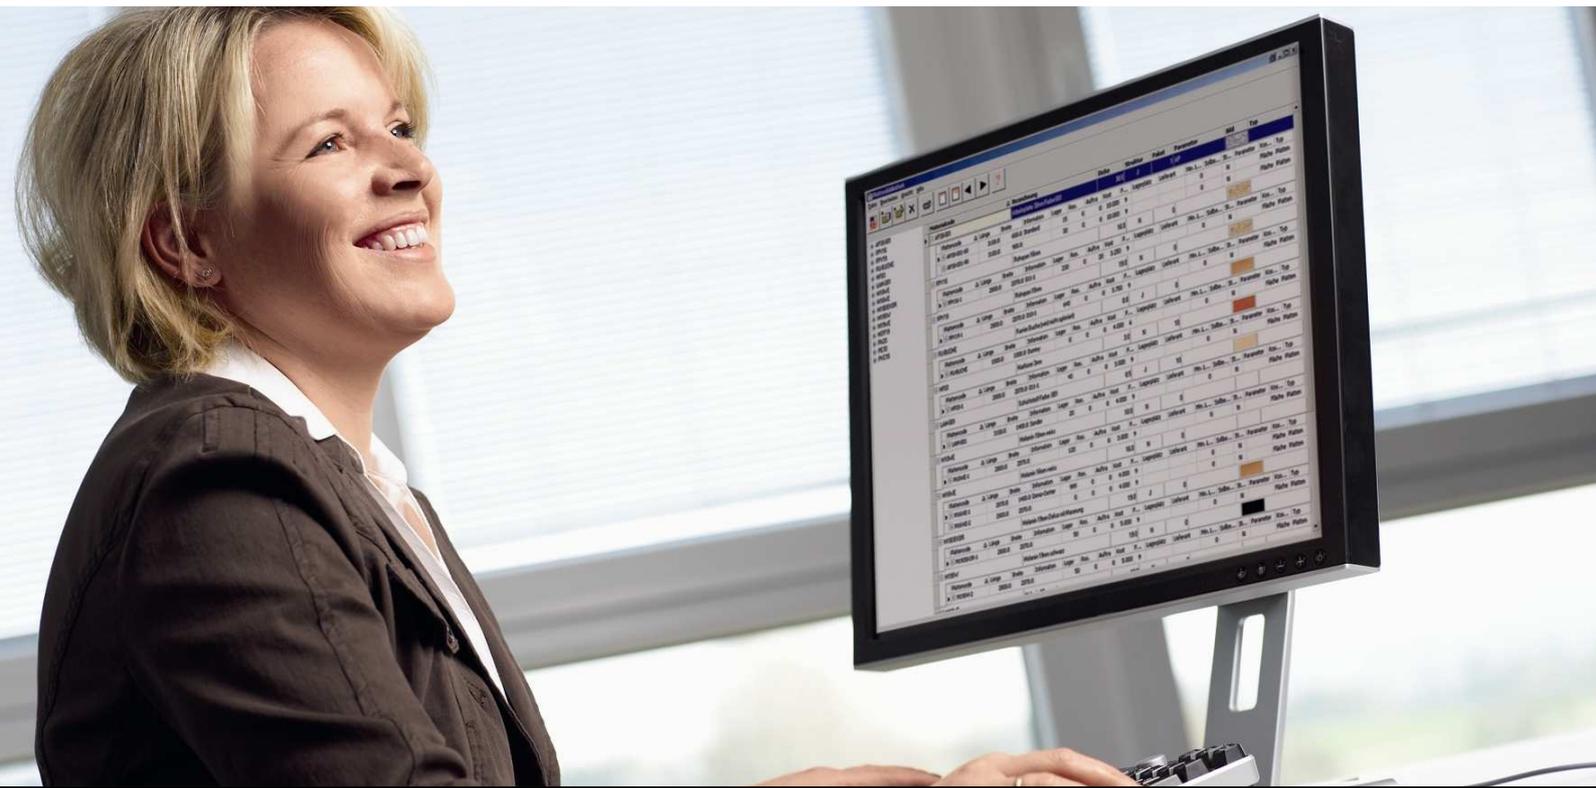

You are already using Cut Rite to optimize your production processes and you rely on a HOLZMA saw for your cutting needs – but are you really utilizing the full potential of your machinery and software? Are both components working together in a highly efficient manner to provide you with great savings? We can collaborate with you on-site to analyze your workflows and show you where and how you can further optimize your processes.

Make the most of your equipment: Optimum interaction between Cut Rite and HOLZMA saws can provide you with huge savings. And we can tell you how.

On-site coaching

The analysis

Two trainers will visit you on-site and start by analyzing your workflow, taking into account your saw settings and operations, the way Cut Rite is used and the interaction between the machinery and the software. The trainers will then present potential areas for improvements, working with you to create a new, optimized workflow concept. This concept will then be implemented with help from the trainers in line with your requirements.

Our experience

All of our HOLZMA trainers have been training customers and technicians for several years. They are experts in both HOLZMA Cut Rite optimization and all HOLZMA saw technology and can draw upon a wealth of practical experience from working with a wide range of different companies.

Before we arrive

We will start by sending you a test cutting pattern and, with your assistance, record the overall cutting time. We will also request your saw settings or access them online – with your permission of course. This information will ensure that we are properly prepared for the on-site analysis.

The cost

In addition to the standard HOLZMA hourly rate, country-specific travel costs apply. We calculate the time required (around one to three days for two trainers) once we are more familiar with your company and your specific setup following an initial consultation.

Just get in touch, and we will give you a no-obligation quote.
